

ALLORAH'S INSIGHTS

March 22, 2015

Spring has sprung, and it road in on the crest of a solar eclipse in Pisces. Last December, Saturn moved from Scorpio to Sagittarius; the Saturn retrograde this year will take it back into Scorpio before returning to Sagittarius this September. If you have: Sagittarius, Scorpio, Gemini or Taurus in your natal chart, you are likely to feel the influence of Saturn pretty intensely. My natal chart means I'm being offered many opportunities to grow on all four fronts; so, the only reasonable choice I can make is to do the work and learn what Saturn is teaching. Some days are easier than others and I trust that I create a much better situation for myself when I actively allow and consistently cultivate the healing of the perceptions and programs of my psyche.

"Every saint has a past, and every sinner has a future." - Oscar Wilde

We are all both sinner and saint. Both aspects help us navigate our path. God does not rule by using fear to motivate or control our choices and actions, only humans do that. God does not judge us sinner or saint, we are simply expressions of Itself forgetting and remembering the true and sacred nature of Our Being. Sinfulness or saintliness are merely reflections of our ability (or lack thereof) to authentically express the divinity within us.

Now is the perfect time for each of us to do an energetic Spring cleaning. Forgiveness is at the top of the list of cleansing healing balms. Forgive God, forgive your circumstances, situation and environment. Most of all forgive yourself. Take the steps to get back into alignment with your good. It is easy and natural to blame but to stay stuck in blame is counter-productive.

Saturn offers much opportunity for the transmutation of karma this year because it will visit two signs and oppose two signs. Scorpio is about death and rebirth, hidden things, transformation and sex; Sagittarius is a healer and optimist who desires freedom. If we are willing to see what is hiding in the shadowy dark of Scorpio, we can heal and transform that which holds us back into a vehicle that allows us to revel in the optimistic freedom Sagittarius so truly craves.
